LICK - WILMERDING

2009-2010

The first impressions most Lick students have of Mr. Marino Sichi are actually from their 8th grade shadow visits, when they are taken in to the woodshop for a rather...startling introduction to the Lick-Wilmerding community. Yet for inexplicable reasons, they still choose to come to Lick, and when given the choice, a great percentage flock to the woodshop, hoping to be the first to tame the "big-bad Mr. Sichi." Well we've got news for you freshman: there is no big-bad Mr. Sichi.

Mr. Sichi is one of the most beloved teachers in the school for a reason; actually make that reasons. We love Mr. Sichi because he cares. Mr. Sichi preaches safety above all else. He tells us this is because of the monumental amount of paperwork he would be required to do if one of his students were to get injured. There may be some truth to that, but we know the truth is deeper. Anyone who has been in his class knows the amount of disturbing stories he has. They see how much each one pains him to tell. Mr. Sichi knows just how dangerous his shop can be, but he hopes that no one else has to find out.

We love Mr. Sichi because he is funny. Although it is spectacularly annoying each time we hear a "Hay is for horses!" or an "I don't know, can you turn on the table saw?" we would be in complete denial not to admit that we crack a smile every time. Most of all, we love Mr. Sichi because he understands. He understands that sometimes you just need to go "measure" in the library. He understands that you don't need to work every minute of every hour in the woodshop, because you're probably going to have to do that the whole rest of the day.

Mr. Sichi, you were missed greatly in the woodshop this year. The Class of 2010 hopes that no other Lick class has to ever endure that.

This Yearbook Is Dedicated To Marino Sichi

A Few Words From Dr. Al Adams

Dear Class of 2010,

If James Lick and Jellis Wilmerding could see you, and the school you have helped to create, they would surely smile! Here you are, 115 years after the founding of Lick's California School of Mechanical Arts and 110 years since the birth of the Wilmerding School of Industrial Arts! Yet the goals of these generous philanthropists – to embrace students from all walks of life, to educate the hands and the heart, as well as the head, and to produce graduates who would pursue lives of purpose and of consequence -- continue to animate L-W's culture and will be embodied by each of you when you last exit onto Ocean Avenue.

Even if L-W's essential values were not part of your DNA when you arrived as ninth graders, they are certainly integral to who you are now. And it is this, more than anything else, that allows me to be optimistic about the future. I say this, in large part, because I have the opportunity to welcome many visitors to our campus, and there are two of your qualities that they always remark on.

The first is that you, as a group, are the kindest, most generous-spirited, young people they have ever met. The second, captured vividly by a Harvard education professor after a day amongst you, is that they have never witnessed a community of high school students so authentically engaged. It was evident to her that you are not here, by and large, to please others. Instead, you are here, living in the present, to engage, to explore and to expand your minds, your potentials and your horizons.

A number of you helped to launch Lick's Philanthropy Initiative this year. Those of you who didn't have that opportunity nevertheless understand, and appreciate, the fact that you will find meaning and fulfillment in life through devoting your time, your talents and your resources to the benefit of others. This, of course, begins with those whom you love, but your arc of care and of influence will spread widely, at first to those whose names you know, and soon, and most often, to those whose names are unknown but whose needs touch your hearts.

James Lick and Jellis Wilmerding had no idea who you would be – a fortunate young person, whose life would be launched, in significant measure, by their dreams. But they took it on faith that honorable stewards would ensure that their bequests would, in perpetuity, enrich your lives as well as those who came before, and those who would come after. You have been prodigious beneficiaries of their foresight and generosity. It is now your turn to emulate them by incrementally, over your lifetime, apportioning your time, your talents and your treasure, to make the world a better place.

Love and best wishes,

Al Adams
Head of School

Journalism/Yearbook Staff

To whom it may concern:

The past few months of creating your yearbook have gone by too fast. But now that we can sit down and reflect on the months gone by, we can honestly say that we did what we set out to do -- the twenty-ten yearbook has become minimalist.

This simple, retro motif that's going on looks to take the focus away from the quirky formatting and clutter of yearbooks past and refocus that attention on those things that matter: the memories, the friends and the times.

Our lives our busy enough already, and for those times when we will want to recollect the good old days, we will not want to be bothered by a loud and tasteless yearbook with no soul of its own.

Themes are passé. Forget them. How much does one really need? Even when you achieve everything you want, maybe this book can at least remind you in all its essence of those simpler times.

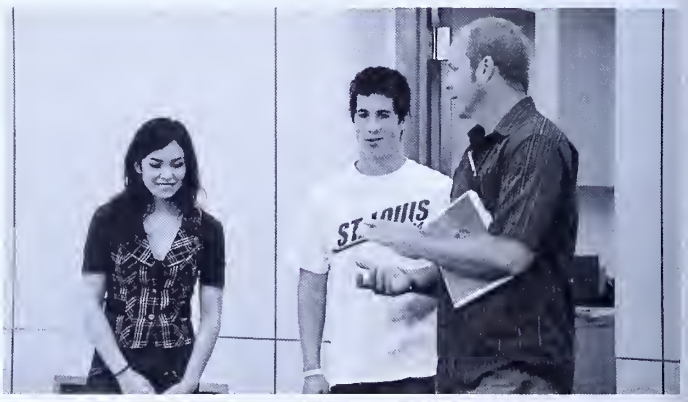
From The Co-Presidents



To the Student Body,

We had a great 2009-2010 school year and hope that you did too. We enjoyed timing your announcements, sharpening your pencils, and providing you with tissues. In all seriousness though, it has been a wonderful year – with the faculty and student body's help, we established an inter-school council among SF schools, created a StuCo page on the LWHS website, and provided textbooks in the Library. We organized dances, the Oracle game, TGIF's, and the Aim High fundraisers. Thank you all for making it a great year!

Your Co-Presidents,
Ashley Bach and David Fleming

Looking for a better, more superior yearbook partner - m4mw - 18 (noe valley)

Date: 2010-01-21, 4:08PM PST

Reply To This Post

Hi everybody, I'm writing to you today to inform you how poor of a yearbook partner Peter Callejo-Black has been. I've decided to search for a new and improved partner.

Duties of a yearbook partner include, but are not limited to the following:
- Turning things in on time
- Daily morning serenades
- Back rubs
- Not creating a generic photo-filled collage with facebook pictures
- Sponge baths
- Preparation of light meals and snacks
- Gratuitous compliments about how great I look in my hipster halloween costume

If you feel you fit this description, please email me at mattisbetterthanpeter(at)gmail.com

- it's NOT ok to contact this poster with services or other commercial interests

Rosemary Cross: Has it ever crossed your mind that you're far too young for me?
Max Fischer: It crossed my mind that you might consider that a possibility, yeah.

"Maybe it's true that people are only truly happy once in their lives. Just once. And then they are punished for it. For the rest of their lives. The punishment is that they never forget that one moment."

Gob: Zero hour, Michael. It's the end of the line. I'm the firstborn. I'm sick of playing second fiddle. I'm always third in line for everything. I'm tired of finishing fourth. Being the fifth wheel. There are six things I'm mad about, and I'm taking over.

On September 28th, 1997, at 4:28pm and 52 seconds, a little bottle by way of the Virgin Islands landed in the arms of Vincent Minnelli. At the same moment, on a tractor in Kansas, Dorothy Gale was thrown into the air by a cyclone during a tornado on its flight to Minneapolis. In a stroke of luck, Dorothy landed, safe and sound, returning from the most literary of journeys. Before Oz was the name from the cornfield book. At the same moment, Captain Hook's consciousness, traveling through Pluto's mucky crust for an egg in his wife Tinker Bell's nest, was born.

"Emotions, in my experience, aren't covered by single words. I don't believe in 'sadness,' 'joy,' or 'regret.' Maybe the best proof that the language is patriarchal is that it oversimplifies feeling. I'd like to have at my disposal complicated hybrid emotions, Germanic train-car constructions like, say, 'the happiness that attends disaster.' Or: 'the disappointment of sleeping with one's fantasy.' I'd like to show how 'intimations of mortality brought on by aging family members' connects with 'the hatred of mirrors that begins in middle age.' I'd like to have a word for 'the sadness inspired by failing restaurants' as well as for 'the excitement of getting a room with a minibar.' I've never had the right words to describe my life, and now that I've entered my story, I need them more than ever." - Jeffrey Eugenides

"god, it looks like dragon's blood."
"how do you even know what that looks like?"
"oh, uhm, i have slain many a dragon i guess."
"oh yeah? really? how do you do it then, huh?
how?"
"...you go for da achille's heel?"
"...proverbially speaking?"
"oh, right. of course."
"so big that, you mean, eyes?"
"well duuuuuh, how else?"

"We all die eventually. The goal is not to live forever, the goal is to create something that will."

The letter fell from my pocket
Seven pages on sixteenth street
I lost my words under tires and feet

"She then said she wondered if she loved me and well, I had no idea about that. After another moment's silence, she mumbled that I was peculiar, that that was probably why she loved me but that one day I might disgust her for the very same reason." - Albert Camus, L'Etranger

He suddenly recalled the famous myth from Plato's Symposium: People were hermaphrodites until God split them in two, and now all the halves wander the world over seeking one another. Love is the longing for the half of ourselves we have lost.
- Milan Kundera, The Unbearable Lightness of Being

Dwight Schrute: Rule 37, dont ruin your book on boys, even you have smudged, or the diamond turns during making mission. There are fifty rules all Schrute boys must learn before the age of five. I always feel this pressure of being a strong and independent icon of womanhood, and without making it look my whole life is revolving around some guy But loving someone and being loved means so much to me. Kronk: Break it down? Are ya kidding me? This is hand-carved mahogany!

"Here's to the crazy ones. The misfits. The rebels. The troublemakers. The round pegs in the square hole. The ones who see things differently. They're not fond of rules. And they have no respect for the status quo. You can quote them, disagree with them, glorify or vilify them. About the only thing you can't do is ignore them. Because they change things. They push the human race forward. And while some may see them as the crazy ones, we see genius. Because the people who are crazy enough to think they can change the world, are the ones who do." – Apple Computer Inc.

"You probably don't think that I can force this towel down your throat. But trust me, I can. All the way. Except I'd hold onto this one little bit at the end. When your stomach starts to digest it, I pull it out. Taking your stomach lining with it. For most people it would take about a week to die. It's very painful."

Kronk: Oh, look. A golden-throated small-winged warbler. Just one more for exotic bird bingo. I am loving this.

Allan Garner: You guys might not know this, but I consider myself a bit of a loner. I tend to think of myself as a one-man wolf pack. But when my sister brought Doug home, I knew he was one of my own. And my wolf pack... it grew by one. So there... there were two of us in the wolf pack... I was alone first in the pack, and then Doug joined in later. And six months ago, when Doug introduced me to you guys, I thought, "Wait a second, could it be?" And now I know for sure, I just added two more guys to my wolf pack. Four of us wolves, running around the desert together, in Las Vegas, looking for strippers and cocaine. So tonight, I make a toast!

"My pilots license? Or perhaps you're referring to my license to kill. Revoked. Problems on the Kazakhstan border. I could give you the details, but then I'd have to kill you, which I can't do because my license to kill has been revoked."

"You had to clip my wings, which you see to be the wind beneath."

Hilary: If you were hotter than David Beckham you would implode from sexy disease. You know, even for David Beckham it's touch and go, sometimes.

Emma: The security was so bad, a band of senior citizen ukulele players could have walked in without question.

Tracy: Yeah yeah yeah, I like risky. See, me and you, we play the game. We know how to be acceptable. Hello great meeting, I drink coffee please. This show is our chance to break the shackles cause the white dudes want to see us fail.
Liz: What white dudes?
Tracy: All of 'em. Jack Donaghy. General Electric. George Bush. Karl Rove.
Liz: Karl Rove, you say?
Tracy: Affirmative action was designed to keep women and minorities in competition with each other to distract us while white dudes inject AIDS into our chicken nuggets. That's a metaphor.
Liz: Sure.

Malcolm: I am convinced he's hiding something.
Principal Gold: Oh, nonsense, Malcolm. He may be a little lost and confused, but deep down he's an all-american, red-blooded male, just like yourself.
Viola: [walking by, dressed as Sebastian, while on the phone] Mom, I will pick out my own dress. And no, I will not wear high heels. Because heels are a male invention designed to make women's butts look smaller... and to make it harder for them to run away.
Principal Gold: Malcolm, have you ever tried to run away in high heels?
Malcolm: No, sir, I...
Principal Gold: No! that easy. No! that easy...
Michael. Dear Michael. Of course it's you, who else could they send, who else could be trusted? I... I know it's a long way and you're ready to go to work... all I'm saying is just wait, just... just wait and please just hear me out because this is not an episode, relapse, fall-up, it's... I'm begging you Michael. I'm begging you. Try to make believe this is not just madness because this is not just madness. Two weeks ago I came out of the building ok, I'm running across 6th avenue there's a car waiting, I've got exactly 38 minutes to get to the airport and I'm dictating. There's this panicked associate squinting along beside me, scribbling in a notepad, and suddenly she starts screaming, and I realize we're standing in the middle of the street, the light's changed, there's this wall of traffic, serious traffic speeding towards us, and I... I freeze, I can't move, and I'm suddenly consumed with the overwhelming sensation that I'm covered in some sort of film. It's in my hair, my face... it's like a glaze... a coating, and... at first I thought, oh my god, I know what this is, this is some sort of amniotic - embryonic - fluid, I'm drenched in afterbirth, I've breached the chrysalis, I've been reborn. But then the traffic, the stampede, the cars the trucks, the horns, the screaming and I'm thinking no-no-no, reset, this is not rebirth, this is some kind of giddy illusion of renewal that happens in the final moment before death. And then I realize no-no-no, this is completely wrong because I look back at the building and I had the most stunning moment of clarity. I... I... I realized Michael, that I had emerged not from the doors of Kenner, Bach & Leeden, not through the portals of our vast and powerful law firm, but from the ahole of an organism who's sole function is to excrete the... the... the poison, the ammo, the defoliant necessary for cities, larger, more powerful organisms to destroy the miracle of humanity. And that I had been casted in this panna of sh*t for the best part of my life. The stench of it and the sting of it would in all likelihood take the rest of my life to undue. And you know what I did? I took a deep cleansing breath and I put that notion aside. I tabled it. I said to myself as clear as this may be, as potent a feeling as this is, as true a thing as I believe I witnessed today, it must wait. It must stand the test of time, and Michael, the time is now.

The Road Not Taken
by Robert Frost
Two roads diverged in a yellow wood,
And sorry I could not travel both
And be one traveler, long I stood
And looked down one as far as I could
To where it bent in the undergrowth;
Then took the other, as just as fair,
And having perhaps the better claim,
Because it was grassy and wanted wear;
Though as for that the passing there
Had worn them really about the same,
And both that morning equally lay
In leaves no step had trodden black.
Oh, I kept the first for another day!
Yet knowing how way leads on to way,
I doubted if I should ever come back.
I shall be telling this with a sigh
Somewhere ages and ages hence:
Two roads diverged in a wood, and I -
I took the one less traveled by,
And that has made all the difference.
